

SKIP SCHOOL

you only get one shot in this life

Hello,

My name is Brian Hogan, a Connecticut born gay filmmaker who just graduated with my MFA degree from Sacred Heart University's graduate film school and am working toward my second master's degree in Clinical Mental Health Counseling.

Skip School began as an idea on a windy beach in Black Rock CT, when I spoke with my old college friend, Hannah, about wanting to make a movie that essentially 'skipped' the school shooting altogether, and instead focused on the aftermath and the fallout in the actual survivors lives. That old college friend plays "Sandy's Mom" in the film.

This film was made as a passion project with the support of the film school, a volunteer student crew, and my producer, Tyler Stirling. The movie has become something I am very proud to have been a part of creating.

I look forward to sharing this film with you and your community and starting a new conversation about how to stay involved and make lasting change.

Best Regards,
Brian Hogan
